About

- Peggy Ross is a multi-media artist trained in visual art and textiles. She paints, stitches, collages and weaves. She has shown her work at galleries and fine craft shows throughout the Pacific Northwest. An avid gardener, her designs explore organic shapes found in the environment, while honoring the geometric grid of woven textiles.

Peggy is an award-winning teaching artist, has completed Kennedy Center and Arts for Learning training and enjoys helping students of all ages build their art muscles. She teaches art in K-12 schools throughout Western Oregon and Washington, and adult education in colleges, community centers and privately.

Artist Statement

By creating, I explore myself and the world around me, collaborate with others and reflect. As a studio artist, I find art making meditative and satisfying, especially weaving.

As a teaching artist, I strive for students absorbed in art making, experiencing the wonder of discovery and joy of self-expression.
